Why hold this conference?

Ethical challenges frequently confront teachers and professional carers of primary school aged children in relation to children's health and mental well-being. These include an increasing number of medical and health related issues. Other issues arise in the class room and the playground which require psychological insights to address them adequately. These range from unrealistic parental expectations, child abuse and peer pressure to specific learning difficulties. Others again stem from changing family structures and dynamics. This conference aims to help educators to better understand and meet these challenges.

Who could benefit from this conference?

Primary school principals, teachers, school administrators as well as before-and-after school care workers.
