Why hold this conference?

Ethical challenges frequently confront teachers and professional carers of children in relation to their health and mental well-being. These include an increasing number of medical and health related issues. Other issues arise in the class room or the playground which require psychological insights to address them adequately. These range from unrealistic parental expectations, child abuse and peer pressure to specific learning difficulties. Others again stem from changing family structures and dynamics. This conference aims to motivate educators and carers to better understand and meet these challenges.

Who could benefit from this conference?

School principals, teachers, school administrators as well as before-and-after school care workers.
