Why hold this conference?

Advance Care Planning involves considering our treatment preferences for a future time when we might be unable to do so. Community awareness about Advance Planning is increasing. What advice should health care professionals and carers give as someone prepares a plan? And in various settings of care, how can we best ensure that this plan truly promotes a patient's best interests, rather than impeding this? This conference explores the ongoing conversation which should occur about Advance Care Planning, and which should involve the patient, their family, and their care professionals and other carers.

Who could benefit from this conference?

All health professionals and carers who care for patients in acute care, emergency care, intensive care, residential and aged care, community care, and palliative care.
This conference will be of interest to doctors, nurses, managers, pastoral care workers, chaplains, allied health professionals and support staff, as well as patients and health and aged care consumers.
